Plaintiffs Angela Prado, Staci Turner, and Kimberly Surette (collectively, "Plaintiffs"), on behalf of themselves and all others similarly situated, by and through their attorneys, for their Complaint against FunPlus International AG and KingsGroup Holdings (collectively, "Defendants" or "FunPlus") allege, on knowledge as to their own actions, the investigation of Plaintiffs' counsel, and otherwise upon information and belief, as follows:

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

- 1. This is a class action lawsuit against FunPlus for falsely advertising price discounts for in-game purchases and other deceptive and unfair business practices in its mobile application game (or "app"), State of Survival ("SOS"). SOS is among the highest grossing mobile strategy games across both Apple and Android devices, with over 100 million downloads and an estimated revenue in excess of $80 million per month.
- 2. Since its 2019 inception, SOS has generated over a billion in revenue by offering players "microtransactions"—the ability, while in the game, to make discrete inapp purchases of in-game valuables necessary to level up one's account. These in-app purchases, or "packs," generally range in price from $0.99 to $99.99 each.
- 3. However, in its direct marketing to consumers (including representations made at the time of purchase), FunPlus advertises false former prices to induce players into believing they must act quickly to take advantage of a limited-time sale price.
- 4. Since SOS launched in 2019 and until present day, FunPlus deceives consumers by offering specific limited-time "bonuses" that purport to massively discount the price of its in-game goods. It uses strikethrough pricing and percentages to trick consumers into believing they were benefitting from limited-time promotions that substantially increased the value of their in-game purchases, especially in relation to purchases made by competing players. These purported savings were false, however, because the original pricing that these ads referenced are fabricated.
- 5. These advertisements have run for years. But at no point, let alone within three months of the advertised discounts, have these in-game items ever actually been offered at a non-discounted price—i.e., without their "limited time" discounts. In other Case No. 3:22-cv-5023 words, FunPlus never sells these items at their "original" price. It just offers false discounts from an original price that did not exist, and its players bought packs on "sale" that were the same prices they would ordinarily pay.

- Furthermore, the advertised "original" pricing does not reflect the prevailing market retail pricing for these virtual in-game items, which have no real-world value and whose pricing is entirely determined by FunPlus.
- 7. The Federal Trade Commission ("FTC") describes these kinds of false former pricing schemes as deceptive:

One of the most commonly used forms of bargain advertising is to offer a reduction from the advertiser's own former price for an article. If the former price is the actual, bona fide price at which the article was offered to the public on a regular basis for a reasonably substantial period of time, it provides a legitimate basis for the advertising of a price comparison. Where the former price is genuine, the bargain being advertised is a true one. If, on the other hand, the former price being advertised is not bona fide but fictitious – for example, where an artificial, inflated price was established for the purpose of enabling the subsequent offer of a large reduction - the "bargain" being advertised is a false one; the purchaser is not receiving the unusual value he expects.

16 C.F.R. §233.1(a).

8. California statutory and regulatory law also expressly forbid such pricing schemes. Specifically, Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §17501 states:

No price shall be advertised as a former price of any advertised thing, unless the alleged former price was the prevailing market price as above defined within three months next immediately preceding the publication of the advertisement or unless the date when the alleged former price did prevail is clearly, exactly and conspicuously stated in the advertisement.

- 9. Defendants knew, or reasonably should have known, that their comparative price advertising is false, deceptive, misleading, and unlawful.
- 10. Defendants have fraudulently concealed from and intentionally failed to disclose to Plaintiffs and the putative class members the truth about their advertised price discounts and former prices.
- 11. Through this false and deceptive marketing, advertising, and pricing scheme, FunPlus has violated California law prohibiting the advertisement of goods for sale as CLASS ACTION COMPLAINT Case No. 3:22-cv-5023 2 discounted from false former prices and prohibiting misleading statements about the existence and amount of price reductions.

- 12. The claims and issues asserted herein are governed by California state law. The State of California has the greatest interest in policing corporate conduct occurring within the State.
- 13. Upon information and belief, the false advertisements and misleading statements emanated from the State of California, where FunPlus's key executives and subsidiaries are located.

PARTIES

- 15. Plaintiff Angela Prado is a resident of California. She began playing SOS around October 2019. She purchased False Strikethrough Packs, False Percentage Packs, and False Limited Availability Packs (defined below) which she otherwise would not have purchased had she known about the deceptive advertising which she reasonably relied upon in making those purchases. She was also double charged for in-app purchases.
- 16. Plaintiff Staci Turner is a resident of Ohio. She began playing SOS around November 2019. She purchased False Strikethrough Packs, False Percentage Packs, and False Limited Availability Packs (defined below) which she otherwise would not have purchased had she known about the deceptive advertising which she reasonably relied upon in making those purchases. She was also double charged for in-app purchases.
- 17. Plaintiff Kimberly Surette is a resident of Canada. She began playing SOS around January 2021. She purchased False Strikethrough Packs, False Percentage Packs, and False Limited Availability Packs which she otherwise would not have purchased had she known about the deceptive advertising which she reasonably relied upon in making those purchases. She was also double charged for in-app purchases.

- 18. FunPlus was founded in California, apparently with the name Halfquest, and has since gone through various iterations of names including "FunPlus" and "KingsGroup". On information and belief, FunPlus has offices in San Francisco, San Mateo, and Irvine, California. Its high-level executives are also located in California, including: (a) Yitao Guan, a resident of Menlo Park and FunPlus International's co-founder and Chief Technology Officer; (b) Andy Zhong a/k/a Yingwu Zhong, a resident of San Francisco and co-founder and Chief Executive Officer; (c) Jeremy Horn, a resident of Los Angeles and VP Head of Innovation; (d) Wei Wang, a resident of Irvine and Chief Creative Officer; and (e) Michael Tong, a resident of San Francisco and Chief Strategy Officer.
- 19. Defendant FunPlus International AG ("FunPlus International") is a Swiss public limited company. FunPlus International was previously known as (i) KingsGroup Europe SA, (ii) KingsGroup International AG, and (iii) KingsGroup International SA. Its directors include Yingwu Zhong (a/k/a Andy Zhong).
- 20. Defendant KingsGroup Holdings is a Cayman Islands corporation. Yingwu Zhong (a/k/a Andy Zhong) is one of its two directors.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

- 22. This Court has jurisdiction over this action under the Class Action Fairness Act of 2005. Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§1332(d)(2), this Court has original jurisdiction because the aggregate claims of the putative class members exceed $5 million, exclusive of interest and costs, and at least one of the members of the proposed classes is a citizen of a different state than Defendants.

FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS

- 27. SOS is a mobile application strategy game developed and operated by Defendants and is available on iPhone and Android devices through the Apple App Store and Google Play platforms, respectively. SOS is a zombie-themed, post-apocalyptic survival game.
- 28. Beginning in 2019, SOS has consistently been among the most downloaded mobile game apps on the Apple and Android app stores, having been downloaded over 100 million times by 2021.
- 29. To boost popularity, SOS has collaborated with AMC's The Walking Dead, UFC's mixed martial arts, and DC Comics to have specialty heroes and themed events.
- 30. Though it is free to initially download, SOS has generated well over a billion dollars in revenue since its inception. It makes this revenue by offering players "microtransactions," or discrete in-app purchases that allow players to advance in the game. These purchases include building material, hero "badges," speed-ups, and other valuables. An "in-app purchase" refers to a financial transaction initiated from within the mobile application itself. The most common form of in-app purchases is for bundled groups 27 28 of resources, or "packs," generally ranging in price from $0.99 to $99.99 each.

- 31. Players engage in "microtransactions" to make in-app purchases containing items that are necessary to progress their account further and maintain competitiveness with other players. This business model contrasts with that of many other popular free apps which offer only non-essential or cosmetic items for purchase. Because SOS offers in-app purchases that advance one's account in direct proportion to the amount of money spent by a player and confer advantages not reasonably attainable by in-game labor alone, it is most accurately classified as a "Pay to Win" mobile game.
- 32. In other words, a player who spends money in the game will be more powerful in relation to players who choose not to spend money in the game. The game leverages this by bombarding players with advertisements and invitations to buy additional packs and resources whenever they reach a point in the game where their progress has stalled. In other words, the game's model is designed to create a sense of urgency around the purchase of in-game resources, and SOS further capitalizes on this sense of urgency by suggesting that purchases are limited-time offerings made available at a substantial discount.
- 33. Once a player creates an account, they are placed automatically into a specific "State," or server, along with several thousand players who also created their accounts at a similar period in time. Thereafter, they are able to begin upgrading the level of their "Headquarters" within their settlement, and the buildings within it. They do this to strengthen their combat abilities and therefore maintain a competitive position among other players in the server.
- 34. The purpose of the game is to advance the strength of one's settlement by upgrading buildings, locating and upgrading heroes, and training a large number of strong troops. The players join large allegiances of other players that compete for dominance within the State through various in-game events.
- 35. In order to progress past a certain level in the game, it is necessary to purchase in-app "packs" that contain the required items to level up one's account in the Case No. 3:22-cv-5023 game. These essential items require spending real money, as they are otherwise only available in insufficient amounts through in-game labor alone.

- 36. After a few days of playing and regularly making upgrades, the cost to acquire the materials needed to make subsequent upgrades increases exponentially.
- 37. For example, to upgrade one's Headquarters to level 2 costs 3,000 wood, one of the many in-game resources that players acquire. The upgrade is completed instantly. But to upgrade one's Headquarters from level 29 to level 30 requires 290 million wood—nearly 1,000,000% of the amount needed for the initial upgrade. Upgrading to level 30 also requires 290 million food, 81.1 million metal, and 23.2 million gas (all additional ingame resources). Once initiated, this upgrade takes 948 hours to complete, unless players purchase construction speed-up boosters.
- If a player does not make any purchases in the game, it would require close 38. to 16 months of playing two hours each day, 365 days a year, to gather the necessary resources to upgrade their Headquarters to level 30. And this is considered to be the first priority upgrade for players; in other words, a player who manages to upgrade their Headquarters to level 30 has only just begun.
- 39. Alternatively (and frequently), the game reminds players that instead of devoting countless hours to progress in the game, they can simply purchase packs. The game designs these upgrades to lure players into spending money on resources.
- 40. These upgrades all cost gameplayers significant, real currency. The packs necessary for these upgrades are generally offered at the following prices: $99.99, $49.99, $19.99, $9.99, $4.99, $1.99 and $0.99. The advertisements for a particular pack at different pricing levels usually have similar graphical advertisements but contain varying amounts of items in proportion to their price.
- 41. To acquire the resources necessary to reach Headquarters level 30, a player would need to spend approximately $1,400 on packs. However, this cost is never made clear to the player because Defendants know that players would not be willing to pay $1,400 if they were aware of the total cost up front. After all, these are players who Case No. 3:22-cv-5023 specifically selected a free-to-play game instead of spending $20 to $60 on a traditional video game that is available for one time purchase, and with the same mechanics.

- 42. Knowing this, Defendants instead leverage the incremental upgrade system to spread this total cost over 29 separate upgrades, all while keeping consumers in the dark. There is no in-game mechanism to review one's purchase history or the total amount one has spent. Upgrade costs are only shown for those upgrades for which the player is currently eligible, meaning Defendants hide the explosive exponential costs of in-game upgrades until the game's players have already invested months of time and money into the game.
- 43. Once players are fully invested, Defendants then use packs to create a false sense of urgency and scarcity to pressure them into making several dozen smaller purchases over a period of days, weeks, or months.
- 44. In other words, at no point are players told it will cost them $1,400 to upgrade their Headquarters to level 30. Instead, they are bombarded with an endless series of advertisements urgently offering limited-time sales, each providing the opportunity to purchase just the incremental resources needed at the time to reach the next level of upgrade.
- 45. Defendants follow this model intentionally to foster dangerous consumer behaviors that ultimately result in more purchases, at the expense of its players.
- 46. Research into microtransactions and human behavior shows that a critical link between microtransaction purchases and problem gaming behavior (i.e., behavior associated with gambling addiction) forms with high frequency purchases. 1 Of note, "Both classical and operant conditioning theories suggest that more frequent events or quicker pay out frequencies could increase the likelihood of problematic microtransaction purchase behavior and problem gambling symptoms through reinforcement."2

Case No. 3:22-cv-5023

- 47. Thus, by luring players into making several smaller, time-sensitive purchases of purportedly high-value packs, Defendants specifically intend to foster addictive behaviors by luring consumers into dangerous spending habits.
- 48. To advance this goal, Defendants create a false sense of urgency, scarcity, and value for the packs they present to consumers, so that consumers will encounter as much pressure as possible to make the frequent, small purchases that lead to addictive behaviors.
- 49. Many displayed packs have a clock timer counting down the time that the pack is still available, creating a sense of urgency and scarcity to induce a player to purchase a pack immediately.
- 50. The pack advertisements consist of a graphical image which has, in writing, the name of the pack. The graphical image also contains any relevant descriptions of "sales" or "special offers" including: whether the pack is (supposedly) offered at a lower price than normal, whether the pack now contains some percentage increase in items received than when the pack is normally purchased, whether the pack offer is limited by a certain timer, and the number of packs available to be purchased (e.g., "Only 1 remaining!").
- 51. However, these advertisements are false, deceptive, and intended to mislead players into making in-app purchases that they otherwise would not have made.
- 52. Defendants falsely promote these packs as being on sale or discounted by misrepresenting that such packs are currently being offered at a lower price than normal, include limited-time bonuses that purport to substantially increase the value of the packs, or have limited availability. Since the game pits players against each other, there is significant pressure on players to take advantage of these limited-time offerings so that they can gain a competitive edge against opponents who presumably are left to pay full price.
- 53. Additionally, the advertisements mislead players into believing they will find themselves at a competitive disadvantage if they do not purchase packs now, since they will be left paying full price for items their opponents were able to purchase at a discount.

54. FunPlus uses false reference pricing schemes to increase sales because they know these reference prices influence purchasing decisions, as consumers want bargains. Fake discounting and false reference prices are widely recognized to be powerful tools in convincing customers to make purchases, and this issue has been studied repeatedly. As one recent research study from the Harvard Business School summarized:

Taken together, evidence from our analysis of observational transaction data and our laboratory experiment suggests that fake prices provide sellers with a powerful tool to enhance demand, but one that may come at the expense of misleading consumers about products' true initial selling prices. Consumers take initial prices as signals of product quality and rate offers as being better deals the higher these initial prices are with respect to present selling prices. Accordingly, fake prices have the highest influence on purchase likelihood for less-informed consumers.

By definition, a fake price offers a fake discount—a discount that does not represent a decrease from some previous selling price but, rather, the difference between the current selling price and a fake introductory price. There is much existing literature on the impact of discounts on consumer behavior beyond . . . ³

55. FunPlus's use of false discounting is particularly effective in influencing purchasing decisions because SOS, like other freemium games, is already highly addictive. As an editorial in the Society for the Study of Addiction has observed:

Predatory monetization schemes in video games are purchasing systems that disguise or withhold the longterm cost of the activity until players are already financially and psychologically committed. Such schemes contribute to the increasing similarity of gaming and gambling and the potential for financial harm for those with Internet gaming disorder.

Game monetization schemes have become increasingly sophisticated and have been featured more prominently within popular on-line games. In our view, some of these schemes could be considered predatory. Predatory monetization schemes typically involve in-game purchasing systems that disguise or withhold the true long-term cost of the activity until players are already financially and psychologically committed. Such schemes are designed to encourage repeated player spending using tactics or elements that may involve, either singularly or in combination, limited disclosure of the product; intrusive and unavoidable solicitations; and systems that manipulate reward outcomes to reinforce purchasing behaviors over skillful or strategic play. Such strategies may exploit inequalities in information between purchaser and provider, such as when the industry uses knowledge of the player's game-related preferences, available funds and/or playing and spending habits, to present offers predetermined to maximize the likelihood of eliciting player spending.4

There are three primary categories of deceptive pack advertisements within 56. SOS: (a) packs that offer the illusion of price discounts through the strikethrough graphics, hereafter referred to as "False Strikethrough Packs"; (b) packs that falsely advertise that a pack contains extra value by containing an extra percentage increase value relative to normal versions of the same pack, hereafter referred to as "False Percentage Packs"; and (c) packs that falsely allege the limited availability of purchases. Any deceptively advertised pack can belong to more than one of these categories simultaneously or may be deceptive for a separate reason outside of the ones belonging to the three main categories.

False Strikethrough Packs

57. The False Strikethrough Packs display an advertised price for which the pack is currently offered. Above that green arrow is a significantly higher price struck through with a red line. The advertisements suggest that the pack was formerly offered at the higher price but is now heavily discounted.

- 58. However, these packs were in fact never offered at the advertised former reference price.
- 59. There are dozens of False Strikethrough Packs sold at multiple pricing tiers, including: "Crates of Choice," packs that purport to offer "Crazy Rebates from your Choice of Crates" offered across the $4.99, $9.99, and $19.99 pricing tiers. None of these packs were ever offered at the former reference prices.
- 60. Defendants had actual knowledge that the False Strikethrough Packs contained false or misleading representations as to their former prices. Defendants designed and promoted these advertisements from 2019 until present day, as the practice of offering these deceptive packs continues.
- 61. The price at which a pack is obtained is a material consideration when reasonable players, including Plaintiffs, decide to make purchases. Players seek to maximize the amount of items obtained from the pack for the lowest cost. Defendants deceive players into taking advantage of discounts so that players believe they may achieve a competitive advantage on the mistaken belief that other players may have to pay the substantially-higher non-discounted price for the same number of items.
- 62. Plaintiffs and the Classes reasonably relied on the "strikethrough" pricing when purchasing numerous False Strikethrough Packs. Had Plaintiffs known the "strikethrough" pricing was false, Plaintiffs would not have purchased many of the False CLASS ACTION COMPLAINT Case No. 3:22-cv-5023 12

Strikethrough Packs that they purchased.

63. If Plaintiffs and the Classes could ever have reasonably realized that the False Strikethrough Packs were never sold at the original reference price, such realization would have occurred only after enough game play that Defendants would have already achieved their goal of establishing addictive spending habits. Thus, to the extent Plaintiffs or any of the Classes continued to make purchases after developing an understanding that the packs were never offered at the original price, this was the calculated and intended result that Defendants sought when engaging in this deceptive and unfair practice in the first place.

False Percentage Packs

64. The False Percentage Packs also falsely advertise that a pack possesses extra value by containing a specific percentage increase in items or resources relative to normal versions of the same pack. The false percentage is indicated by a large and attention-grabbing bubble in the pack's graphical advertisement that contains a quantitative claim regarding the increase in value of this pack relative to packs which are not on sale.

For example, the Darts Mega Bundle pack is offered with a graphical image of a red bubble containing "1550%"—indicating to a reasonable consumer that this specific pack is discounted because it contains a 1550% increase in the value or quantity of items contained within it when compared to a Darts Mega Bundle without such a representation.
- 66. Defendants intentionally designed the packs to mislead players into believing that the packs represented a sale value, including both a false original reference price and an illusory increase in value, to induce those players to purchase the packs. Defendants knowingly took those ordinary item packs and simply placed a percentage graphic on the ad copies without altering anything else.
- 67. Defendants have been promoting these False Percentage Packs from 2019 until present day, as the practice continues.
- 68. Plaintiffs all reasonably relied on the percentage graphics on the False Percentage Packs as a material consideration in purchasing those packs. Had the Plaintiffs known the packs were not actually on sale in the manner represented, they would not have purchased the False Percentage Packs.

False Limited Availability Packs

69. The False Limited Availability Packs indicate that a particular pack can only be purchased a finite number of times within the server. For example, text underneath a pack advertisement may say "Only 1 remaining!" These advertisements create a sense of artificial scarcity whereby players are pressured into purchasing packs containing valuable items to enhance their accounts, ostensibly to simultaneously deprive competitors from accessing the same packs.

70. However, Defendants' representations as to the scarcity of the packs are false. Other players are also able to purchase these packs even if another player buys all Case No. 3:22-cv-5023 CLASS ACTION COMPLAINT of the supposedly remaining packs. Furthermore, the player who purchased the False Limited Availability Pack is often offered the same pack to purchase again, especially at the $99.99 pricing tier.

- 71. Defendants intentionally designed the packs to mislead players into believing that the packs were limited in availability. Defendants knowingly added a message to players communicating an artificial scarcity in order to induce them to purchase the packs immediately.
- 72. Plaintiffs all reasonably relied on the textual advertisements of supposed scarcity accompanying the ad copy as a material consideration in purchasing those packs. Had the Plaintiffs known the packs were not actually scarce or limited, they would not have purchased the False Limited Availability Packs.

Unfair Practice of Double-Charging and Purchase Banning

- 73. Aside from the deceptive marketing of packs, Defendants have engaged in other unfair and oppressive conduct towards players making in-app purchases in SOS.
- 74. Defendants often processed duplicative payments for the same packs. All Plaintiffs purchased some quantity of packs for which they were charged twice instead of only once.
- 75. Defendants denied Plaintiffs' refund requests for any duplicative charges of their in-app purchases. When Plaintiffs Angela Prado and Staci Turner sought refunds for the charges through the Apple Store or Google Play Store, Defendants "purchase banned" them from SOS if they were successful in obtaining the refunds. "Purchase banned" players are unable to make any subsequent in-app purchases within SOS. This effectively destroys the ability of those players to meaningfully compete in the game, even when those players have spent tens of thousands of U.S. dollars, often forcing the players off the game.
- 76. The practice of "purchase banning" any players who successfully obtain refunds for duplicative charges from the App store is widely practiced by Defendants. Defendants therefore attempt to coerce players into accepting these phantom charges by effectively holding their entire accounts hostage, into which players have often invested significant real money and time.

77. All Plaintiffs were double charged for some of their in-app purchases on SOS. Plaintiffs Angela Prado and Staci Turner were subsequently purchase banned in SOS after obtaining some refunds back from the App store.

CLASS ALLEGATIONS

78. Plaintiffs bring this action pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a), (b)(2), and (b)(3), on behalf of themselves and the following proposed "Global Class":

All persons, within the applicable statute of limitations, who purchased False Strikethrough Packs, False Percentage Packs, False Limited Time Availability packs, or any packs in which they were double-charged, and/or such subclasses as the Court may deem appropriate.

79. Plaintiff Angela Prado also brings this action on behalf of herself and on behalf of the following subclass (the "California Class"):

All persons in California, within the applicable statute of limitations, who purchased False Strikethrough Packs, False Percentage Packs, False Limited Time Availability packs, or any packs in which they were double-charged, and/or such subclasses as the Court may deem appropriate.

80. Plaintiff Staci Turner also brings this action on behalf of herself and on behalf of the following subclass (the "Ohio Class"):

All persons in Ohio, within the applicable statute of limitations, who purchased False Strikethrough Packs, False Percentage Packs, False Limited Time Availability packs, or any packs in which they were double-charged, and/or such subclasses as the Court may deem appropriate.

- 81. Excluded from the proposed Classes are Defendants and their employees, officers, directors, legal representatives, heirs, successors, subsidiaries, and affiliates, and the judicial officers and their immediate family members and associated court staff assigned to this case, as well as all persons who make a timely election to be excluded from the proposed class.
- 82. Certification of Plaintiffs' claims for class-wide treatment is appropriate because Plaintiffs can prove the elements of their claims on a class-wide basis using the same evidence they would use to prove those elements in individual actions alleging the same claims.

- 83. This action meets all applicable standards of Fed. R. Civ. P. 23 for class certification, in that Plaintiffs can demonstrate the elements delineated below.
- 84. Numerosity. The members of the proposed Classes are so numerous and geographically dispersed that individual joinder of all proposed class members is impracticable. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(1). While Plaintiffs believe that there are hundreds of thousands of members of the proposed Classes, the precise number of class members is unknown, but may be ascertained from Defendants' books and records. On information and belief, Defendants maintain a list of users that includes personal information for the user including their email addresses, whether they have made in-app purchases, and which in-app purchases they have made.
- 85. Applying a reasonable and prudent person standard to the users of State of Survival under the same or similar circumstances, each user would qualify to be a class member requesting the right to cancel and get refunds on their in-app purchases. Any reasonable and prudent person under the same or similar circumstances wants to have the flexibility to disaffirm an in-app purchase that was made while believing that the packs they purchased were part of a sale or promotion but, in reality, were not.
- 86. Commonality and Predominance. This action involves common questions of law and fact, which predominate over any questions affecting individual class members. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(2) and (b)(3). These include, without limitation:
- a. Whether Defendants engaged in the conduct alleged in this Complaint;
 - b. Whether Defendants violated the applicable statutes alleged herein;
- c. Whether Defendants designed, advertised, marketed, distributed, sold, or otherwise placed State of Survival into the stream of commerce in the United States;
 - d. Whether Defendants' conduct emanated from the State of California;
 - e. Whether Plaintiffs and the class members are injured and harmed directly by Defendants' false advertising designed to entice users into making in-app purchases they otherwise would not have made;

- Whether Plaintiffs and the class members are entitled to damages due to Defendants' conduct as alleged in this Complaint, and if so, in what amounts; and
- Whether Plaintiffs and members of the Classes are entitled to g. equitable relief, including, but not limited to, restitution or injunctive relief as requested in this Complaint.
- 87. Typicality. Plaintiffs' claims are typical of the putative class members' claims because, among other things, all such class members were comparably injured through Defendants' wrongful conduct as described above. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(3). Defendants' creation and display of its misleading advertisements is uniform for all Plaintiffs and class members.
- 88. Adequacy. Plaintiffs are adequate proposed class representatives because their interests do not conflict with the interests of the other members of the proposed Classes they seek to represent, because they have retained counsel competent and experienced in complex class action litigation, and because they intend to prosecute this action vigorously. The interests of the proposed Classes will be fairly and adequately protected by Plaintiffs and their counsel. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(4).
- 89. Declaratory and Injunctive Relief. Defendants have acted or refused to act on grounds generally applicable to Plaintiffs and the other members of the proposed Classes, thereby making appropriate final injunctive relief and declaratory relief, as described below, with respect to the proposed Classes as a whole. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(2). Defendants' wrongful conduct alleged herein is grounded in the creation and dissemination of their pack offerings in-game, which are displayed uniformly. Plaintiffs' and the class members' injuries are real, immediate, and ongoing. Plaintiffs and class members seek injunctive and declaratory relief from Defendants.
- 90. Superiority. A class is superior to any other available means for the fair and efficient adjudication of this controversy, and no unusual difficulties are likely to be Case No. 3:22-cv-5023 CLASS ACTION COMPLAINT 19 encountered in the management of this class action. The damages or other financial detriment suffered by Plaintiffs and putative class members are relatively small compared to the burden and expense that would be required to individually litigate their claims against Defendants, so it would be impracticable for members of the proposed Classes to individually seek redress for Defendants' wrongful conduct.

- 91. Applying the principles of equity or balance of equities, expecting an individual Plaintiff who is at a disadvantage with limited resources and spending capacity, and with minimal negotiating power, if any, to litigate claims against Defendants, multibillion-dollar corporations that have immense resources and deep pockets, would be unfair. Class actions are a necessary and essential means to provide for public interest litigations with checks and balances to curtail deceptive practices by powerful private corporations, including Defendants.
- 92. There is no special interest in class members individually controlling the prosecution of separate actions. And even if class members could afford individual litigation, the court system could not. Individualized litigation creates a potential for inconsistent or contradictory judgments, and it increases the delay and expense to all parties and the court system. By contrast, the class action device presents far fewer management difficulties and provides the benefits of single adjudication, economy of scale, and comprehensive supervision by a single court. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3).

CALIFORNIA LAW APPLIES TO ALL CLASSES

- 93. California's substantive laws apply to every class member, regardless of where the class member resides.
- 94. California's substantive laws may be constitutionally applied to the claims of Plaintiffs and the Classes under the Due Process Clause, 14th Amend. §1, and the Full Faith and Credit Clause, Art. IV §1 of the U.S. Constitution. California has significant contacts, or significant aggregation of contacts, to the claims asserted by Plaintiffs and all class members, thereby creating state interests that ensure that the choice of California state law is not arbitrary or unfair.

- 96. FunPlus's decision to reside in California and avail itself of California's laws, and to engage in the challenged conduct from and emanating out of California, renders the application of California law to the claims herein constitutionally permissible.
- 97. California is also the state from which Defendants' alleged misconduct and false statements emanated. This conduct similarly injured and affected Plaintiffs and all other class members.
- 98. The application of California laws to the Classes is also appropriate under California's choice of law rules because California has significant contacts to the claims of Plaintiffs and the proposed Classes, and California has a greater interest in applying its laws here than any other interested state.

FIRST CLAIM FOR RELIEF

Violation of California's Unfair Competition Law ("UCL")

Cal. Business & Professional Code §17200 et seq.

(By Plaintiffs, individually and on behalf of All Classes)

- 99. Plaintiffs incorporate by reference all allegations in this Complaint and restate them as if fully set forth herein.
- 100. The UCL defines unfair business competition to include any "unlawful, unfair or fraudulent" act or practice, as well as any "unfair, deceptive, untrue or misleading" advertising. Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §17200.
- 101. A business act or practice is "unlawful" under the UCL if it violates any other law or regulation.
- 102. A business act or practice is "unfair" under the UCL if the reasons, justifications, and motives of the alleged wrongdoer are outweighed by the gravity of the Case No. 3:22-cv-5023

- 103. A business act or practice is "fraudulent" under the UCL if it is likely to deceive members of the consuming public.
- 104. Defendants have violated the "unlawful" prong under the UCL and have engaged in "unfair, deceptive, untrue or misleading" advertising.
- 105. The Federal Trade Commission Act prohibits "unfair or deceptive acts or practices in or affecting commerce" (15 U.S.C. §45(a)(1)) and specifically prohibits false advertisements. 15 U.S.C. §52(a). FTC Regulations describe false former pricing schemes—similar to Defendants' False Strikethrough Packs and False Percentage Packs in all material respects—as deceptive practices that would violate the FTC Act.
 - One of the most commonly used forms of bargain advertising is to (a) offer a reduction from the advertiser's own former price for an article. If the former price is the actual, bona fide price at which the article was offered to the public on a regular basis for a reasonably substantial period of time, it provides a legitimate basis for the advertising of a price comparison. Where the former price is genuine, the bargain being advertised is a true one. If, on the other hand, the former price being advertised is not bona fide but fictitious—for example, where an artificial, inflated price was established for the purpose of enabling the subsequent offer of a large reduction—the "bargain" being advertised is a false one; the purchaser is not receiving the unusual value he expects. In such a case, the "reduced" price is, in reality, probably just the seller's regular price.
 - A former price is not necessarily fictitious merely because no sales at the advertised price were made. The advertiser should be especially careful, however, in such a case, that the price is one at which the product was openly and actively offered for sale, for a reasonably substantial period of time, in the recent, regular course of his business, honestly and in good faith—and, of course, not for the purpose of establishing a fictitious higher price on which a deceptive comparison might be based. And the advertiser should scrupulously avoid any implication that a former price is a selling, not an asking price (for example, by use of such language as, "Formerly "), unless substantial sales at that price were actually made.
- 107. California law also prohibits false former pricing schemes. Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §17501, entitled "Value determinations; Former price advertisements," states:

For the purpose of this article the worth or value of any thing advertised is the prevailing market price, wholesale if the offer is at wholesale, retail if the offer is at retail, at the time of publication of such advertisement in the locality wherein the advertisement is published.

No price shall be advertised as a former price of any advertised thing, unless the alleged former price was the prevailing market price as above defined within three months next immediately preceding the publication of the advertisement or unless the date when the alleged former price did prevail is clearly, exactly, and conspicuously stated in the advertisement.

- 108. As further detailed in the Second Claim for Relief below, California's False Advertising Law also prohibits a business from "[a]dvertising goods or services with intent not to sell them as advertised," Cal. Civ. Code §1770(a)(9), and prohibits a business from "[m]aking false or misleading statements of fact concerning reasons for, existence of, or amounts of price reductions." Id. §(a)(13)
- 109. The False Strikethrough Packs, False Percentage Packs, and False Limited Availability Packs violate the unlawful prongs of the UCL since they violate 16 C.F.R. §233.1, Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §17501, and Cal. Civ. Code §§1770(a)(9) and (a)(13).
- 110. The False Percentage Packs misrepresent the existence of a sale whereby players can allegedly purchase more items and resources from a pack than they normally could for the same price.
- Defendants' use of the False Percentage Packs violates 15 U.S.C. §45(a)(1), 15 U.S.C. §52(a), and the FTC Guidelines published in Title 16, Code of Federal Regulations, Section 233.
- 112. Defendants also violated and continue to violate Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §17501, and Cal. Civ. Code §1770, sections (a)(9) and (a)(13), by advertising false discounts from purported former prices that were, in fact, not the prevailing market prices within three months preceding the publication and dissemination of advertisements containing the false former prices.
- 113. Defendants have also violated the "unfair" prong of the UCL by falsely representing that its consumers received a discount from a referenced "original" former price of its False Strikethrough Packs where, in fact, Defendants set an arbitrary price for the goods contained in these packs and then falsely pretended the packs had ever been offered for sale without their supposed discount.

- Additionally, Defendants have violated the "unfair" prong of the UCL by falsely representing that its False Percentage Packs contained unique and specific increases in items or resources when, in fact, they contained the same resources and ingame items as they always do.
- Defendants have also violated the "unfair" prong of the UCL by doublecharging players for purchased packs and then penalizing players for seeking and obtaining refunds for these double purchases, thereby deterring players from obtaining refunds to which they are entitled.
- Defendants have also violated the "unfair" prong of the UCL by engaging in predatory practices designed to foster gambling addiction in consumers, in that they: (a) deploy their microtransactions in a way specifically designed to ensnare players into addictive spending habits; (b) falsely create a sense of urgency, scarcity, and value in order to secure addictive high frequency microtransactions; and (c) use incremental cost stepups to prevent players from realizing the true cost of the game and how much they have spent. Defendants' goals in engaging in these practices are far outweighed by the harm they cause.
- 117. These acts and practices are unfair because they were likely to cause consumers to falsely believe that Defendants were offering value, discounts, or bargains from the prevailing market value or worth of the products sold that do not, in fact, exist. As a result, purchasers (including Plaintiffs) reasonably understood that they were receiving valuable price reductions on purchases of in-game items. This, in turn, has induced reasonable purchasers to buy such products from Defendants that they would not have otherwise purchased.
- The gravity of the harm to Plaintiffs and members of the Classes resulting from these unfair acts and practices outweighs any conceivable reasons, justifications, or motives that Defendants may have had for engaging in such deceptive acts and practices.
- 119. Additionally, Defendants have violated the "fraudulent" prong of the UCL Case No. 3:22-cv-5023 CLASS ACTION COMPLAINT 24 because their marketing and advertising materials included false "original" prices for its False Strikethrough Packs, and because these same materials also suggested that the offers in the False Percentage Packs and False Limited Availability Packs were unique, limited, and would no longer be available at those price points following the conclusion of its sale events. In actuality, the packs never contained the limited time deals or discounts they purported to offer.

- 120. Defendants' acts and practices deceived Plaintiffs and the Classes at large. Specifically, Plaintiffs and the Classes relied on these misleading and deceptive representations regarding the limited-time bonuses they could expect to receive in the packs. Each of these representations and deceptions played a substantial role in Plaintiffs' decisions to purchase the packs, and Plaintiffs would not have done so in the absence of such representations.
- 121. Plaintiffs and the Classes never received the benefit of their bargains with Defendants, in that the "discounted" resources offered for sale in the packs did not give them the anticipated competitive edge against their opponents. Competitors could simply purchase packs at the same false sale pricing, or with the same number of items, or the same pack availability notwithstanding representation that these were limited time offers.
- 122. Similarly, players who purchased the False Percentage Packs and the False Strikethrough Packs defensively (to protect against becoming overpowered by opponents who they believed had been able to take advantage of the purportedly limited-time bonuses) were deprived of the benefit of their bargains, because the threat itself was a fabrication. There was never a risk of falling behind due to a player's failure to purchase items at their discounted price, because the price was always discounted.
- 123. As a result of these violations under each of the fraudulent, unfair, and unlawful prongs of the UCL, Defendants have been unjustly enriched at the expense of Plaintiffs and members of the proposed Classes. Specifically, FunPlus has been unjustly enriched by obtaining revenues and profits that it would not otherwise have obtained absent its false, misleading, and deceptive conduct

SECOND CLAIM FOR RELIEF

Violation of California's False Advertising Law ("FAL") Cal. Business & Professional Code §17500 et seq. (By Plaintiffs, individually and on behalf of All Classes)

- 125. Plaintiffs incorporate by reference all allegations in this Complaint and restate them as if fully set forth herein.
- The FAL prohibits unfair, deceptive, untrue, or misleading advertising, including, but not limited to, false statements as to worth, value, and former price.
- Furthermore, the FAL provides that: "No price shall be advertised as a former price of any advertised thing, unless the alleged former price was the prevailing market price as above defined within three months next immediately preceding the publication of the advertisement or unless the date when the alleged former price did prevail is clearly, exactly and conspicuously stated in the advertisement." Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §17501.
- The False Strikethrough Packs and the False Percentage Packs 128. misrepresent the existence of a sale whereby players can allegedly purchase packs at a discounted price, or with an increased percentage of items or resources. The False Limited Availability Packs misrepresent the exclusive nature, and therefore competitive value, of the packs.
- Through their unfair acts and practices, Defendants have improperly obtained money from Plaintiffs and the class members. As such, Plaintiffs request that this Court cause Defendants to restore this money to Plaintiffs and all class members, and to Case No. 3:22-cv-5023

THIRD CLAIM FOR RELIEF

Violation of the California Consumers Legal Remedies Act ("CLRA") Cal. Civ. Code. §1750 et seq.

(By Plaintiffs, individually and on behalf of All Classes)

- Plaintiffs incorporate by reference all allegations in this Complaint and restate them as if fully set forth herein.
- 131. Plaintiffs and the other class members are consumers within the meaning of Cal. Civ. Code §1761(d) and have engaged in a transaction within the meaning of Cal. Civ. Code §§1761(e) and 1770.
- Defendants are "persons" within the meaning of Cal. Civ. Code §§1761(c) and 1770 and they sell "goods or services" within the meaning of Cal. Civ. Code §§1761(b) and 1770.
- SOS and the in-app purchases are a "good" or "service" within the meaning of Cal. Civ. Code. §§1761(a) and (b).
- 134. Defendants have violated §1770(a)(13)'s proscription against making false or misleading statements of fact concerning reasons for, existence of, or amounts of, price reductions by misrepresenting the existence of discounts via False Strikethrough Packs, misrepresenting the existence of special sales through their False Percentage Packs, and misrepresenting the exclusive nature, and therefore competitive value, of the packs through their False Limited Availability Packs.
- 135. Plaintiffs and the other class members suffered actual damages as a direct and proximate result of the Defendants' actions, concealment, and/or omissions in the advertising, marketing, and promotion of its bait apps, in violation of the CLRA, as evidenced by the substantial sums Defendants pocketed.

FOURTH CLAIM FOR RELIEF

Violations of Ohio Consumer Sales Practices Act Ohio Rev. Code §1345.01, et seq.

(By Plaintiff Staci Turner, individually and on behalf of the Ohio Class)

- Plaintiff Staci Turner, individually and on behalf of the Ohio Class, incorporates by reference all allegations in this Complaint and restates them as if fully set forth herein.
- 138. Staci Turner, the Ohio class members, and Defendants are persons within the meaning of Ohio Rev. Code § 1345.01(B). Defendants are suppliers as defined by Ohio Rev. Code § 1345.01(C).
- 139. Staci Turner and the Ohio class members are "consumers" as that term is defined in Ohio Rev. Code § 1345.01(D), and their purchases of the False Strikethrough Packs, False Percentage Packs, and False Limited Availability Packs are "consumer transactions" within the meaning of Ohio Rev. Code § 2345.01(A).
- Ohio Rev. Code 1345.02 (the "Ohio CSPA") prohibits unfair or deceptive acts or practices in connection with a consumer transaction. The Ohio CSPA prohibits a supplier from: (i) representing that goods have characteristics, uses or benefits which the goods do not have; (ii) representing that their goods are of a particular quality or grade that the product is not; and (iii) representing that the subject of a consumer transaction has been supplied in accordance with a previous representation, if it has not.
- Defendants' unfair or deceptive acts or practices were likely to and did in fact deceive reasonable consumers, including Staci Turner and the Ohio Class.
- Defendants' violations present a continuing risk to Staci Turner and the Ohio Class, and the general public. Defendants' unlawful acts and practices complained of herein affect the public interest.
- 143. Pursuant to Ohio Rev. Code § 1345.09, Plaintiff Staci Turner and the Ohio Case No. 3:22-cv-5023 CLASS ACTION COMPLAINT 28

Class seek an order enjoining Defendants' unfair and/or deceptive acts or practices, actual damages – trebled, and any attorney's fees, costs, and any other just and proper relief, to the extent available under the Ohio CSPA.

FIFTH CLAIM FOR RELIEF

Fraud

(By Plaintiffs, individually and on behalf of All Classes)

- 144. Plaintiffs incorporate by reference all allegations in this Complaint and restate them as if fully set forth herein.
- 145. Defendants represented to all Plaintiffs that various purchased packs were on sale in that they were offered at a lower price than normal, that certain packs were offered with an increased percentage of items and resources compared to their normal counterparts, and that pack purchases were only available in limited quantities.
- 146. These representations were false because the packs were never offered at higher prices, the increased percentage versions of the packs were identical to their normal counterparts, and the packs were not actually available in scarce quantities to other players in the State or to the individual player making the purchases.
- 147. Defendants designed the graphical images on the advertisements in a way that intentionally attracted Plaintiffs to the enticing but false claims regarding existence of sales, item and resource bonuses, and artificial scarcity.
- 148. Plaintiffs reasonably relied upon the claims made in the advertisements in deciding to purchase the aforementioned packs.
- 149. Upon purchasing the packs, Plaintiffs were harmed because, had Plaintiffs known the claims were false, they would not have made those purchases.
- 150. Plaintiffs' reliance on Defendants' misrepresentations in its pack advertisements was a substantial factor in causing harm to Plaintiffs.
- 151. Defendants' conduct has therefore caused and is causing immediate and irreparable injury to Plaintiffs and the class members and will continue to both damage Plaintiffs and the class members and deceive the public unless enjoined by this Court.
